Target Audience
This module is aimed for health science students and current health professionals wanting to gain a broader understanding of the practice of healthcare in remote, austere and resource-limited environments.
Module Description
This module aims to expand on the concepts of assessing and managing a patient in the remote out-of-hospital environment. It will provide students with advanced knowledge, understanding and skills to undertake preliminary patient assessment and treatment, and will introduce them to the range of management options available for paramedics within a defined range of situations. This knowledge, and the skills gained during the module, will directly assist them in preparing for their placement modules.
